

National Museum of Flight East Lothian

Get on board Scotland's Concorde

The National Museum of Flight is an historic airfield used in both the First and Second World Wars. Based in the gently rolling countryside of East Lothian, just outside Edinburgh, the museum is home to one of Europe's best collections of aircraft including Scotland's Concorde.

Climb on board Concorde to discover what transatlantic flight was like and learn more about the legacy of this iconic aircraft. Join the high-flying jet set in our Boeing 707 cabin, then visit our Fortunes of War display to find out how East Fortune Airfield has evolved and grown over the years and hear the personal stories of the servicemen and women who served at the base.

A unique group visit

Head off on a journey of discovery at this former airfield, on a half or full day tour from Edinburgh. The museum at East Fortune is located only 40 minutes' drive from Edinburgh. Combine with other East Lothian attractions like Dirleton Castle, Glenkinchie Whisky Distillery or the Scottish Seabird Centre.

Coach parking

There is ample parking on site. Coach drivers and guides can enjoy a free museum visit plus a complimentary lunch in the Aviator Café.

The Aviator Café

Snacks and lunches can be pre-booked in the café.

Fascinating stories to discover

Iconic aircraft

The National Museum of Flight is home to a number of iconic aircraft, including the legendary Spitfire, the Cold War Vulcan bomber and a Hawk, flown by the world-famous Red Arrows.

The museum is also home to Scotland's Concorde – the most iconic passenger plane ever to take to the skies. Get on board this supersonic aircraft to discover what transatlantic flight was like for passengers and crew and learn more about Concorde's legacy.

First and Second World Wars

The museum houses a world-class collection of Second World War aircraft and First World War artefacts. In our Military Aviation Hangar examine the roles that aircraft have played in conflict throughout the 20th and 21st centuries. Learn more about the people who designed and flew these amazing machines, including the world-famous Spitfire, the oldest surviving Harrier Jump Jet and the Tornado F3.

Historic Airfield

Before it was home to the National Museum of Flight, East Fortune Airfield was one of the UK's key military bases during the First and Second World Wars. Explore the historic site on foot and visit our recreated 1930s Parachute Store. Then find out how the airfield has evolved and grown over the years and hear the personal stories of the servicemen and women who served at the base in our Fortunes of War gallery.

Get on board

Step inside a number of aircraft around the museum, including a BAC 1-11 passenger aircraft and a 1962 de Havilland Comet. Join the 1960s jet set on the UK's only surviving Boeing 707 cockpit and cabin and find out what made supersonic travel so special on Concorde.
